Past performance does not predict future returns. The value of your investment and any income on it may go down as well as up and may vary. Changes in exchange rates may have an adverse effect of the value of the Fund. In difficult market conditions, the Fund may not be able to sell a security for full value or at all. This could affect performance and could cause the Fund to defer to suspend redemptions of its shares.

POSITIONING & STRATEGY

We are fundamental, long-term, bottom-up investors seeking to create a high-conviction portfolio of reasonably valued, high-quality companies that are exposed to, or operate in, emerging markets. Portfolio positioning is the output of our bottom-up based convictions, rather than a specific top-down view.

The fund delivered an absolute return in the quarter, but relative performance has been challenged by the market's enthusiasm for companies exposed to the artificial intelligence (AI) supply chain. Our strict valuation discipline has led to reduced exposure to some of the largest AI beneficiaries within the index.

TSMC and MediaTek are both excellent examples of technology companies we admire. TSMC is an exceptional business with a clear role in enabling the next generation of computing but after strong performance its shares are no longer particularly cheap, with very high earnings expectations vulnerable to any slowdown.

Our purchase of MediaTek demonstrates that we continue to be willing to make investments into technology companies when valuations are reasonable. We purchased MediaTek shares when it was priced as a mature mobile-phone semiconductor business, not an AI capex beneficiary. We first came to know the business many years ago as a DVD-chip manufacturer. Since then, management has repeatedly shown an ability to move into adjacent areas, acting as a fast follower offering lower-cost solutions.

MediaTek's shares rose by more than 200% during the quarter after it was reported that the company has become a chip design partner to Google. As the share price moved to reflect this potential, we have been selling shares. MediaTek was attractive when investors focused on declining mobile-phone revenue, but after a significant re-rating the balance of risk and reward is less attractive.

It is important not to allow one theme to obscure the broader opportunity set. There is more to emerging markets than just semiconductors. We continue to find attractive long-term opportunities in less crowded areas of the asset class, including financials, healthcare, industrials and consumer-facing businesses across countries such as Brazil, South Africa, Mexico, India and Vietnam.

These companies are generating good earnings growth, have strong balance sheets, are led by aligned owners or managers, and trade at valuations that we believe offer a much healthier balance between risk and reward. This quarter's absolute return was driven by a broader collection of businesses rather than a single theme.

OUTLOOK

In an increasingly volatile geopolitical environment, strong corporate governance is more important than ever to protect investors. We actively seek out owners and management teams with long track records of treating all their stakeholders fairly. The portfolio currently offers investors a collection of high-returning businesses with low levels of leverage available at reasonable valuations. In our experience, that is a strong foundation for long-term returns.

The strategy has a significant exposure to high-quality domestic franchises such as leading retailers, soft drinks makers and financial institutions meeting unmet needs. These may prove to be more defensive than the AI capex beneficiaries thanks to the demographic opportunity available in some emerging markets, which can be seen in structural trends such as urbanisation, rising incomes and shifting consumption patterns. Finally, strong balance sheets help companies withstand economic downturns, and as a result we won't invest in businesses with a record of excessive borrowing.

OUTLOOK

In an increasingly volatile political environment, strong corporate governance is more important than ever to protect investors. We actively seek out owners and management teams with long track records of treating all their stakeholders fairly.

Many years of experience of investing in inflation-prone emerging markets has taught us to seek companies with strong pricing power. A proven ability to create intellectual property, ownership of strong brands and well-managed retail franchises are some of the attributes of companies we have seen navigate previous periods of inflation. Regulated assets or assets at high risk of being regulated often lack pricing power, which can leave them more exposed to inflationary pressures, and for that reason we have tended to avoid holding these in our portfolios.

The strategy has a significant exposure to high-quality domestic franchises such as leading retailers, soft drinks makers and financial institutions meeting unmet need. These may prove to be more defensive in the current period of trade friction and are also beneficiaries of the demographic opportunity available in some emerging markets, which can be seen in structural trends such as urbanisation, rising incomes and shifting consumption patterns.

Strong balance sheets help companies weather economic cycles, and as a result we won’t invest in businesses with a record of excessive borrowing. Most importantly, our investment philosophy and process are designed to ride out stormy waters. Historically these storms have originated within our own markets, but developed markets are the source of the current bout of volatility and may continue to be so.

Finally, we believe valuations for businesses within our portfolio look attractive on an absolute basis and the long-term return opportunity in emerging markets continues to be a very attractive one.
